

It's taken us 150 years to get here.
We intend to have some fun.

The year was 1869. The Civil War had ended not long ago, the Great Transcontinental Railroad had joined the country from sea to sea, and Centerville Public Library became established in Moses Hallet's General Store. Now, almost 150 years later, we're still here and getting ready to celebrate in 2019 with some great events.

Next spring we'll install a unique lobby display that will take you through important points of our history and introduce you to some of the amazing people who contributed to our success over the years. The Children's Room will join in with timely programs highlighting our beginnings. In addition, look for an outstanding exhibit from our friends at the Centerville Historical Museum showing the library's first days at the 1856 Country Store.

Next Memorial Day we'll be in the parade to officially kick off the summer portion of the celebration and a commemorative event is planned for August that you don't want to miss.

Celebrate with us! Because, more than books...

Centerville Public Library is YOU!
